

Use of Distributed Temperature Sensors During Wellbore Treatments

Abstract

The invention relates to a method for treating subterranean formation comprising providing distributed temperature sensors, injecting a treatment fluid and monitoring the temperature across the treatment interval during the injection process.